Below is a web link to a guide for developing Community Access Plans which BCBC has chosen as the means by which to deliver the short term programme of the adopted Local Transport Plan. A Community Access Plan contains transport schemes that facilitate short local journeys particularly on foot and by bicycle. In some communities, walking and cycle routes may exist but may not be safe. In some communities, walking and cycle routes may not exist at all. In either case, a Community Access Plan would help to identify all the transport network in an area, assess its shortcoming and potential and explores ways of making better use of it. The central focus of a Community Access Plan is to make routes safer and secure to use. It also ensures that walking and cycle routes are convenient to all sectors of the population. Community Access Plans or the process of developing it promotes social inclusion, cohesion and fosters a sense of community ownership.
